The Araucania's Mails

Queen Louise's Monument

Berlin, March 1880.

A royal celebration so truly patriotic as that of today has been rarely witnessed even in Monarchical

Germany. The monument of Queen

Louise was unveiled in presence of her surviving children, the Emperor, Princess Charles, and the Grand Duchess Dowager of Mecklenburg-Schwerin. With the entire Royal Family, all Berlin may be said to have assisted at the inaugural ceremony.

It is a patron saint were possible in a Protestant country Queen Louise would occupy that position in Prussia. The impersonation of all that is good, noble, and feminine, her elevated, conduct in the most calamitous period of Prussian history added the glory of the royal heroine to the more delicate graces of the perfect woman, wife and mother. As her image has been handed down by history, and by tradition, it stands before the Prussians pour-traying a lady who confers a bright lustre upon the Throne than she could have derived from it or any earthly position however exalted.

Queen Louise was born, it is not a British subject, at least a subject of a King of Great Britain. Her father an appanage Prince of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, having entered the Hanoverian service in 1776—the year of the Queen's birth—was a Field Marshal and Governor-General in the service of the King of Hanover. In 1806, Frederick William, then Crown Prince of Prussia, happening to visit Darmstadt, where the Prince was then residing with his grandmother, fell in love with the beautiful girl. This marriage was
